DERBY DAY AT CHURCHILL DOWNS

(Reprinted by request)

Olé so! in his western run when the blue meets the red the bugle calls the equine stars that their bounding, bay-furred flanks to test their might and legs and sand in that dash for fifty grand.

The track is fast, it's rarely found On Derby day at Churchill Downs.

With wizen men aboard their backs The thoroughbreds strain into the track Before the stands they prance and rear; At last they're at the barrier.

A moment of supreme suspense The crowd is tense with silence A mighty cry "They're off!" resounds On Derby day at Churchill Downs.

They fight and scramble for the lead And jockeys caw with hands and knees Until, at last, they round the bend. With staccato strokes the whips descend To call forth a final burst of speed From these valiant racing steeds. The five-fourth mile has been unwound On Derby day at Churchill Downs.

At last the tired and dusty beast Are allowed to cool and feast. Thousands present have dispersed Now to praise and others to curse The triumph of this new found fife. 'Tis won the right through speed to reign Until another horse is crowned On Derby day at Churchill Downs.

Tenmore: afternoon in the fading light of a dying sun one of 12 horses I select his steed across the finish line at historic Churchill Downs and the classic of the Kentucky Derby. Not that it will be anything new, here; have been doing it for some 42 years—ever since. After a day's work with the first Kentucky Derby held in 1875, but people—no off with the world of all sorts to watch the world's most renowned race.

HOW TO LOSE FRIENDS

AND INFLUENCE NOBODY

By Kate Durgelle

Do you present yourself to people in such a way that they feel as though they never want you as a friend? In other words, do you try to make them feel that you are a burden to them? Do you try to make them feel that you are a burden to them? Do you try to make them feel that you are a burden to them?

Maybe you are like this individual who thinks that by trying to dominate a situation in the dormitory that he makes himself a "self-declared Dictator". He answers telephone, shakes himself every time your head creaks the floor, and insists every night and cranny of your room. There's no comfort allowed in his presence.

Or you go like this well-known individual who walks with a limp and is too fat. He has a sweet, cheerful voice which he uses on all occasions. Even this doesn't compare with his little pit on the forehead, which he gives with a condescending air. Females preferred.

Probably your case may be similar to this one. We have a classmate who wants to show his utilitarian by monopolizing the class. The teacher looks bored so he does all the students. He talks so rapidly and loudly that the small, nervous creature in the back of the room can't still while "Mr. I Know It All" will come.

What a question is asked here, he answers with a lot of empty phrases, that is, if he knows it. He doesn't know it, he beats around the bush and answers anything. If another individual accidentally is allowed to answer anything, this creature always puts on an additional nothing. He introduces nobody, especially the teacher.

Maybe you are a "Lapdog". You are of course, familiar with him. After every class he rushes to the teacher and exclaims in a flattering voice: "I am glad to see you, sir." Some of our friends participate in this especially. Some have a different technique. They sit in the front row, fluff their hair, point their teeth, criss their short-sided.

If another individual accidentally is allowed to answer anything, this creature always puts on an additional nothing. He introduces nobody, especially the teacher.

Maybe you are a "Lapdog". You are of course, familiar with him. After every class he rushes to the teacher and exclaims in a flattering voice: "I am glad to see you, sir." Some of our friends participate in this especially. Some have a different technique. They sit in the front row, fluff their hair, point their teeth, criss their short-sided.

HOW TO LOSE FRIENDS

AND INFLUENCE NOBODY

By Kate Durgelle

Do you present yourself to people in such a way that they feel as though they never want you as a friend? In other words, do you try to make them feel that you are a burden to them? Do you try to make them feel that you are a burden to them? Do you try to make them feel that you are a burden to them?

Maybe you are like this individual who thinks that by trying to dominate a situation in the dormitory that he makes himself a "self-declared Dictator". He answers telephone, shakes himself every time your head creaks the floor, and insists every night and cranny of your room. There's no comfort allowed in his presence.

Or you go like this well-known individual who walks with a limp and is too fat. He has a sweet, cheerful voice which he uses on all occasions. Even this doesn't compare with his little pit on the forehead, which he gives with a condescending air. Females preferred.

Probably your case may be similar to this one. We have a classmate who wants to show his utilitarian by monopolizing the class. The teacher looks bored so he does all the students. He talks so rapidly and loudly that the small, nervous creature in the back of the room can't still while "Mr. I Know It All" will come.

What a question is asked here, he answers with a lot of empty phrases, that is, if he knows it. He doesn't know it, he beats around the bush and answers anything. If another individual accidentally is allowed to answer anything, this creature always puts on an additional nothing. He introduces nobody, especially the teacher.

Maybe you are a "Lapdog". You are of course, familiar with him. After every class he rushes to the teacher and exclaims in a flattering voice: "I am glad to see you, sir."
